Although ASPs of solar supply-chain were squeezed shortly for trade barriers between nations, with international policies supporting solar as one of the best alternative energies, solar markets are stable and demands are increasing gradually now. With well recognized and competitive high-end brand name, GET is now discussing price raise for high-end Victoria series wafers with global customers.

GET strategies are to cooperate with global high-level customers to expand high-end market share. In response to possible industry and policy volatilities, GET is evaluating to set up oversea production line of downstream module, target to get closer to end market and future stable profits.
